

Butchers ready to almost bare it all

By DANIEL MILLS

SHEDDING all but their aprons and underwear, two cheeky Raymond Terrace butchers are putting their skin on show for charity.

In what is likely to have shoppers turning twice, Ethan Patfield, 21, and apprentice Jake Crowfoot, 17, of Browns Butchery are working in their underpants.

The pair are supporting the Hunter Life Education's annual awareness and fundraising event, Dress Down Drug Free day this Friday.

Ethan, who has been "dressing down" for the past three years, has convinced workmate Jake to get on board.

He said not only is it a good cause, but he hoped it raised the profile of the business.

"Last year we raised $1500 and we will have a bucket on the counter again for gold coin donations," he said.

Ethan, who feels right at home in his own skin, can't wait.

Jake however looked a little more apprehensive about the move but has accepted the challenge.

To donate, call in to Brown's Butchery tomorrow.

FOR A CAUSE: Ethan Patfield and Jake Crowfoot are ready for tomorrow.

– Picture by Stephen Wark